Surging Mobs Demanding the Lives of the Negroes Turner and Patterson.

Jennie Bowman, Their Victim, at the Point of Death-Guarding the Jail.

The Mayor's Proclamation-Troops Called Out-Another Meeting Called-Great Excitement.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., April 30.—Every thing was quiet about the jail yesterday morning, though the talk was that another and more determined effort would be made to lynch the negroes at night. The rumors that Miss Janie Bowman had died of her injuries in circulation tended to revive the excitement over the outrage, and toward evening crowds began to collect on the streets in the vicinity of the jail, until by ten o'clock several thousand men and boys were in the neighborhood. Later another crowd assembled, probably 500 strong, and marched down Jefferson street, steadily an d silently, until near the corner of Sixth and Jefferson streets, where they were met by one hundred police, who rushed out of a hall where they were bivouacked. The crowd moved on in a determined manner that seemed likely to force the police uside, but the latter stood firm, and for a time there was a pell-mell, hand-to-hand fight, which resulted in several broken heads and arrests. The leaders were soon taken and rushed off to a station house, and the crowd gave way and took to their beels and in a moment were in full flight. The police, after pursuing them a short distance, returned and formed a line across the street, where they remained on guard.

The answer of the Governor to a call for aid from the militia was received at 11:15 o'clock yesterday morning, and several companies were ordered to guard the jail. Despite this, however, at 12:25 p. m. the agreed signal of eleven taps by the fire department bells in case of an attack upon the jail was rung, as great crowds of pec ple were pressing toward the jail, around which the militia were stationed, and the bolice and a mob were fighting.

By 12:45 p. m. about 3,000 people were assembled on the jail square, and Jefferson street was the scene of great confusion, people rushing toward the jail from all points, but no serious collision had occurred and it was not expected that any would at present, as the crowd was forming out of the members of the legion when they were expected to report for duty at the armory. The people misunderstood the alarm. The crowd then dispersed and no more trouble was feared. Late in the afternoon the mayor issued the following proclamation:

MAYON'S OFFICE, LOUISVILLE, Ky., April 29.
—To the people of Louisville: It is my duty as mayor to enjoin upon the people the necessity for preserving order and maintaining the majesty of the law. A most diabolical crime has been committed in our city, but the law must inflict the punishment. A riot is more dangerous to good government than any individual criminal. Lynch law to disperse. P. R. REED, Mayor.
While the mayor was inditing the above the first movement looking to an organiza-tion of the exasperated people, who openly and on all sides advocated lynching, was being made. In response to a notice which had been distributed among the thousands who rushed to the jail at the alarm at midday, given to order the members of the militia to report for duty, about 500 men gathered in front of Leiderkranz hall, on Market street. The jamitor refused them admission to the hall and the police were endeavoring to disperse them, when Dr. Berry, a well known physician of the city. Berry, a well known physician of the city.

Berry, a well known ph posed to mob law, there was nothing to be done in this case but to lynch the negro fonds. The law had again and again failed to punish murderers. They had been sent to the penitentiary when they ought to have been hung. The lawyers defended blood-stained criminals whom they knew to be guilty. If this crime was not atoned for a chance would be missed to set a terrible example to the hundreds of idle, worthless and thieving negroes who in-fested the alleys and slums of the city.

The doctor was cheered at frequent interruls. Whitehe was speaking Major Kinney, a leading criminal lawyer, passed through the crowd. A number of the men stopped him and then, surrounding him, demanded in an excited manner why he defended men whom he knew to be criminals. The major commenced to explain and expostulate, declaring that he had never acted as attorney for a man whom he believed to be guilty. He was never more earnest or eloent in his life, and breathed a heavy sigh of relief when he slipped out of that throng.

The doctor resumed his remarks and the meeting adjourned to a hall near by, where the names of about one hundred citizens whose sentiments were known, and who, it was believed, would join any organized effort to lynch the negroes, were selected.

On Market street a crowd of about 100 men were marching up and down, each with about a foot of white cotton rope tied to the arm. In a prominent place on the court house is the illuminated design: court house is the illuminated design:

"Wanted-500 men to join this mob." Up to this writing good order has prevailed.

The mob appears to have no leader and appears to be only watching out of curiosity for something to turn up. The police and militia are determined to defend the jail, come what may, and if the attempt is made there will be bloodshed sure.

The soldiers late last night were ordered from the armory to the jail, with a Gatling gun. A crowd of fully 10,000 people was surging to and fro on Jefferson street. Many women were seen mingling with the growd. All appeared to be attracted by curiosity only, and the best of order pre-

Three hundred and fifty soldiers with a Gatling gun and 150 armed policemen stood guard 25 the jail. The meeting agreed upon to take place at the court house to-day will not be allowed, and there is hardly a doubt now that the law will be allowed to take its course. The girl is almost certain to die, and the evidence is strong enough in that case to bring both men 10 the gallows.

BOOKISH OR LITERARY. Why Great Students Are Not Very Often Great Writers.

A bookish people do not make great books. The Germans are, we suppose, the most bookish people in the world; and though they make magnificent enesclopsedias, the most learned of disquisitions, and scientific treatises beyond all praise; though they edit classics as few but German scholars ever edited them; though they master the principles of comparative grammar, and exhaust the views which can be taken on the philosophy of history, and treat "the categories" of all things namable with a thoroughness that both bewilders and enraptures less masterly logicians; though their dry prolegomena to drier studies enlarge our conceptions of the range of human industry, and their revisions, which they characteristically term "belaborings" (Bearbeitungen), of former works betray not only their extraordinary fidelity of diligence, but their immense humility; yet when all is said that you can say of the vast merits of this literary people, you certainly can not say that they have a literature to compare with the English. And the reason is, as we believe, simply this-that a bookish people can not produce the greatest books, if we mean by the greatest books something more than monuments of investigation or learning-namely, living powers, powers that stir the heart, books whose words have, as Luther, the most unbookish of men, called it, "hands and feet" that can wring us in their living grasp. That is where Homer beats even the tragedians of the great Athenian age; he was not bookish, but for that very reason wrote a book that had the life of a whole world in it; while Euripides, Sophocles, and possibly even Æschylus, were in a sense bookish, and make you feel that the life they deal with was, as and it were, the distilled water of life, not the water of life as it bubbled up from the fresh earth. So Virgil and Horace were in the highest sense literary men; they saw life as reflected in a polished surface, not in its primitive vigor and simplicity. And yet it is certain that in proportion as the modifying process curiosity. Later, however, it was reported goes on by which life becomes subdued that the alarm was the usual call to notify to the literary type and manner, in that proportion we lose that special charm of freshness which constitutes the chief difference between the books of bookish men and the books of out-ofdoors people who are not bookish at all.—Lendon Spectator.

Dr. C. Keller, of Zurich, claims that spiders perform an important part in the preservation of forests by defendthan any individual criminal. Lyach law subverts every principle of law and at tacks our very civilization. I, therefore, in the discharge of my duty, request every citizen to remain at home to-night and to avoid all gatherings, and I caution parents not to permit their children to go in the streets, as their presence increases the number and adds to the excitement. I must and will discharge my duty to uphold the law and to preserve good order, and I command all riotous assemblages to disperse.

is often the result of "but blood" in a family or community, but nowhere is bad blood more destructive of happiness and health than in the human system. When the life current is foul and sluggish with impurities, and is slowly distributing its poisons to every part of the body, the peril to health, and life even, is imminent. Early symptoms are dull and drowsy feelings, severe headaches, coated tongue, poor appetite, indigestion and general lassitude. Delay in treatment may entail the most serious consequences. Don't let disease get a strong hold on your constitution, but treat yourself by using Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and be restored to the blessings of health. All druggists.

TREATING THE WRONG DISEASE.

Many times women call on their family physicians, suffering, as they imagine, one from dyspepsia, another from heart disease, another from liver or kidney disease, another from nervous exhaustion or prostration, another with pain here or there, and in this way they all present alike to themselves and their easy-going and indifferent, or over-busy doctor, separate and distinct diseases, for which he prescribes his pills and potions, assuming them to be such, when, in reality, they are all only symptoms caused by some womb disorder. The physician, ignorant of the cause of suffering, encourages his practice until large bills are made. The suffering patient gets no better, but probably worse by reason of the delay, wrong treatment and consequent complications. A proper medicine, like Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, directed to the cause would have entirely removed the disease, thereby dispelling all those distressing symptoms, and instituting comfort instead of prolonged misery.

I began taking Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and using the local treatment recommended in his 'Common Sense Medical Adviser.' I commenced to improve at once. In three months I was perfectly cured, and have had no trouble since. I wrote a letter to my family paper, briefly mentioning how my health had been restored, and offering to send the full particulars to any one writing me for them, and enclosing a stamped-encelope for reply. I have received over four hundred letters. In reply, I have described my case and the treatment used, and have earnestly advised them to 'do likewise.' From a great many I have received second letters of thanks, stating that they had consmenced the use of 'Favorite Prescription,' had sent the $1.50 required for the 'Medical Adviser,' and had applied the local treatment so fully and plainly laid down therein, and were much better already."

Of Crustal, Mich., writes: "I was troubled with female weakness, leucorrhea and falling of the womb for seven years, so I had to keep my bed for a good part of the time. I doctored with an army of different physicians, and spent large sums of money, but received no lasting benefit. At last my husband persuaded me to try your medicines, which I was loath to do, because I was prejudiced against (them, and the doctors said they would do me no good. I finally told my husband that if he would get me some of your medicines, I would try them against the advice of my physician. He got me six bottles of the "Pavorite Prescription," also six bottles of the 'Discovery' and four of 'Favorite Prescription,' and I have been a sound woman for four years. I then gave the balance of the medicine to my sister, who was troubled in the same way, and she cured herself in a short time. I have not had to take any medicine now for almost four years."
